Sunshine Lutey was born in Wisconsin as Naomi Tyson into a Jesus oriented world presided over by her father, a kindly Assembly of God minister and her mother, an ultra disciplinarian. At 19 Sunshine married Lloyd Lutey, also from a deeply religious family. The new couple gradually cast off the raiments of faith. They created a secular life, earned college degrees, raised two children and lived and worked in Nevada and Southern California for 32 years. They enjoyed 10 years together in Laguna Woods Village (formerly known as Leisure World) until Lloyd died at 66. Sunshine subsequently married David Hartman, a retired New York attorney who had recently lost his wife. Sunshine's early life was filled with music as she sang and played the piano for religious groups. Her performance skills took root in Laguna Woods where she formed and performed in various musical groups. She and David produced and performed in 20 major community shows from 2008 through 2017 and raised tens of thousands of dollars for several community charities. Sunshine currently produces and performs in weekly shows for the benefit of South County Adult Day Services.
